

Your AllProPay Program Summary

Colon Brothers Auto Sales Inc.

Prepared for	Andreas & Raul Colon Brothers Auto Sales Inc. Florida
Prepared by	Chris Ste-Marie AllProPay
Program	Dual Pricing (customer pays the fee)
Date	May 26, 2026

Overview

Andreas and Raul, this is a quick recap of what was covered on the call so you both have it in writing before we finish the application this afternoon.

You have been on a dual-pricing program for ten years, passing the fee to the customer at the counter, but your current processor is still billing you $80 to $200 a month on top of that. That was not the deal you signed up for, and it is the main reason for the switch.

Our program does exactly what you thought you were already getting: customer pays the processing fee, you keep 100 percent of the sale, and the only line item on your statement is a flat $25 platform fee. With your volume, we are going to mark the account to waive that as soon as you cross $10K in a month, which based on what you shared is every month.

Your Program At A Glance

PLATFORM FEE $25/mo Flat. Same number every month. Marked to be waived once you cross $10K in monthly volume.
PROCESSING FEES $0 Customer pays the fee at the counter. You keep the full ticket on every sale.
SETUP & CONTRACT $0 No setup fee, no contract, no cancellation fee. New terminal included.

Your Business Snapshot

Monthly volume $10K+	High ticket $6K - $7K	Card environment In person	Years in business 10+
---------------------------------	-----------------------------------	--------------------------------------	---------------------------------

Your current setup should already be costing you nothing on the processing side. The fact that a $80 to $200 charge is hitting your statement every month, and changing in size month to month, is not how a properly structured dual-pricing program works. On the new program, that variable line item goes away entirely.

What We Are Cleaning Up

1. The $80 to $200 monthly charge

On a real dual-pricing program, the merchant should not be paying processing fees on top of the customer paying them. The fact that your current provider has been billing you anyway, in fluctuating amounts, is the issue. Switching to AllProPay closes that gap.

2. Predictability

One of the things you mentioned was not knowing what the bill was going to be from month to month. Our $25 platform fee is flat. It does not move with volume, card mix, or anything else. The only number that ever changes on your statement is your sales.

3. Direct support

You get my direct line and the account manager's direct line. Anything on the account, billing questions, equipment, statements, you call us, not a 1-800 queue. That is how we work with every merchant we bring on.

What Happens Next

Five steps. Most of this is on us.

- 1

3:00 PM today. Quick call with Raul to finish the application. Ten minutes, mostly business info plus Raul's details as the signer and a voided check or bank letter from Wells Fargo.
- 2

24 to 48 hours. Underwriting reviews and approves.
- 3

Terminal programmed and shipped. We test the equipment in-house, confirm funds route to your account the next day, then send it. You typically have it within 24 hours of shipping. Target in your hand by Friday.
- 4

Test transaction together. We get on a call when the terminal arrives, run a test, confirm everything is working, and you go live.
- 5

We close your old account. We handle the cancellation paperwork with the previous processor so you do not have to chase it. First month platform fee is reimbursed on our side, and the waiver is in place going forward as long as you stay above $10K per month.

How We Work

- No contracts. If it does not work, you can leave. There is no early termination penalty.
- No setup fees, no cancellation fees. Standard across every account we open.
- Transparent pricing. What you sign for is what you pay. The number does not change three months in.
- Direct lines. You and your partner both get my cell and the AM's cell. Use them.
- We close out the old account. So you are not paying two processors during the transition.

Talk at 3:00 PM today

Have Raul's name, date of birth, Social, and home address ready, plus a voided check or bank letter from Wells Fargo. Federal tax ID too if you have it handy. Ten minutes and we are done.
